PROFILE

Brook Willard is an American/Canadian director of photography working in dramas and commercials. Current projects include Walker: Independence, a western set in 1880s Texas which recently completed filming at Bonanza Creek Ranch in Santa Fe, NM.

With his significant background in high-budget features and action/stunt photography, Brook's approach to cinematography elevates its subject matter through the lens of his past experience. Brook spent more than a decade working hand-in-hand with the industry's finest directors and cinematographers in his former career as one of the film industry's most prominent digital imaging technicians.
